

Sensors Expo & Conference Unveils Fourth Annual 2019 Women in Sensors Engineering Program; Features Speakers from Amazon, Intel, and Shell Oil

Popular interactive panel session returns accompanied by a networking cocktail reception on the Expo Floor

Framingham, MA – April 29, 2019 – The 34th annual Sensors Expo & Conference (#Sensors19) today announced an encore of the popular Women in Sensors Engineering (WISE) Program. Held Wednesday, June 26th at 4:30PM, this interactive panel session will provide an opportunity for female engineers to hear from leaders in their field, solicit advice, share their contributions in the sensors community, and be inspired by the best and brightest in the industry. Following the panel, attendees and participants are invited to a networking cocktail reception on the Expo Floor. For more information or to register for this event, please visit sensorsexpo.com/wise.

The 2019 panel will be moderated by Angie Keller, Senior Vice President, Randstad Engineering and feature speakers including:

- Melanie Daniels, Principal Engineer, Intel Corporation
- Allyson Hartzell, Managing Consultant, Veryst Engineering
- Marlina Nickel Johnson, IoT COE Manager, Shell Oil
- Melissa Saelzer, Sr. Technical Program Manager, Amazon
- Jocelyn Tan, Electro-Optical Engineer, Lockheed Martin

“I’m thrilled to be a part of this panel of female leaders and to contribute to the dialogue around how each of them navigates their careers in a male-dominated industry,” says Keller. “It’s crucial for women to see and hear from strong females in the field who are paving the way, and in some cases, shaking things up to challenge historical norms.”
